

Sleeping through winter

Apple trees rest in the winter. They do best in climates where it gets below 45 degrees in the winter.

Tiny buds form in the summer and develop in the autumn. They grow a covering of hair that keeps them warm in the winter. The fuzzy hair protects them while the trees are dormant.